

The New Color of Money Safer. Smarter. More Secure.

Dear Subscribers,

Just in time for the beginning of the new school year, a lesson plan designed to teach students about the features of the newly redesigned $50 note is now available in the Youth Education section of www.moneyfactory.com/newmoney. The $50 note will be issued beginning on September 28.

The plan, which has been developed by the Department of The Treasury's Bureau of Engraving and Printing and the Federal Reserve, offers educators the opportunity to teach U.S. history, economics and language arts at the National Standard level and includes a variety of educational activities in four independent sections. For example, in section three of the lesson, students are asked to write an essay about a person, monument, symbol, or scene they would like to include on their ideal newly redesigned currency. Students can submit their essays online and view other essays to learn about other students' views.

The Youth Education program is just one component of the U.S government's public education program for the New Color of Money, and includes calssroom education materials that meet or exceed national education standards and are available free of charge to parents, teachers, and students. The Bureau of Engraving and Printing and the Federal Reserve encourage you to utilize all of the resources available online at www.moneyfactory.com/newmoney to make learning about the newly redesigned $50 note fun! Students can play games, view an interactive note, and discover much, much more.
